

INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY of ETHNOBIOLOGY

DONATE TO THE ISE

The activities of the ISE contribute to the understanding of human-nature relations, and promotion of harmonious interaction between societies and their environments. Donations of any amount are appreciated. In acknowledgment of your generous support, the names of donors will be listed (with permission) on the ISE website.

Donations can be made to support the general activities of the ISE or one of the following specific activities:

Activities	Donation Amount
General ISE activities
The Darrell Posey Fellowship The Darrell Posey Fellowship promotes understanding of peoples' complex and dynamic relationships with their environment. It supports researchers, and indigenous peoples and local communities working to sustainably manage and secure rights to their environment and resources, through its Small Grants, Field Fellowship and Oxford Fellowship programs. For more information on these programs, see www.ethnobiology.net .
The Global Coalition for Biocultural Diversity The Global Coalition for Biocultural Diversity is the arm of the ISE dedicated to promoting dialogue and exchange between Indigenous peoples, scientists, policy makers, and concerned citizens to develop shared objectives and strategies to nurture the biological and cultural diversity of the earth. The Global Coalition seeks to involve a greater diversity of Indigenous peoples and local community groups in matters concerning biocultural diversity.
The Kimanani Fellowship The Kimanani Fellowship was established in 2005 in memory of the life and work of Ebi Kimanani, a distinguished Kenyan biostatistician whose work to promote African solutions to the epidemics of AIDS and malaria included a focus on traditional knowledge and ethnobiology. This fellowship will support the costs of attendance at the 2008 ICE for a young African ethnobiologist or ethnobiologists, preferably working on health issues. (For more information on the two 2006 Kimanani Fellowship recipients, please see www.ethnobiology.net ).
The ISE Student Prize The ISE Student Prize, to be awarded for outstanding contributions by students at International Congresses of Ethnobiology.
